

The Goat and the Fox

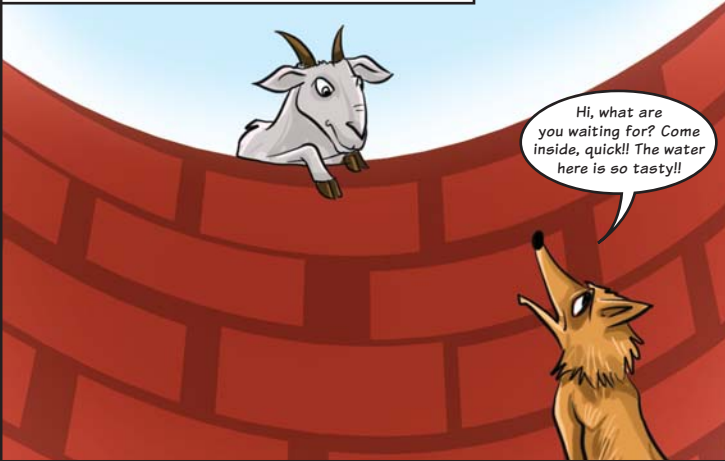

On a summer afternoon, a thirsty fox leaned into a well to have some water.

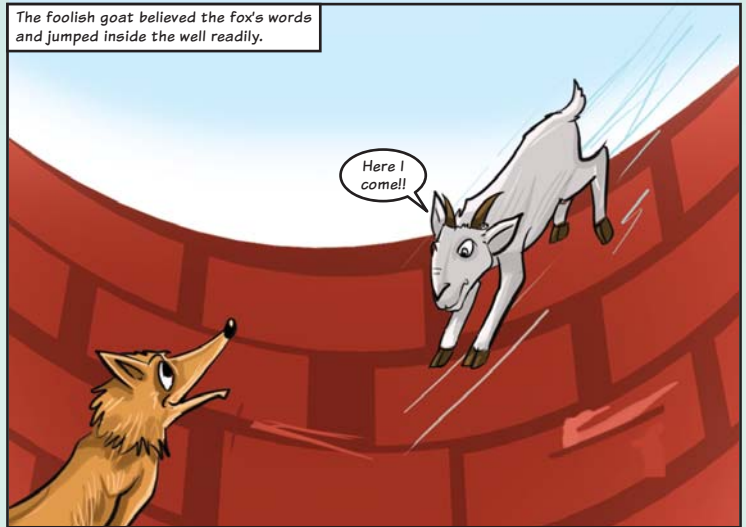

Accidentally, the fox slipped and fell inside the well.

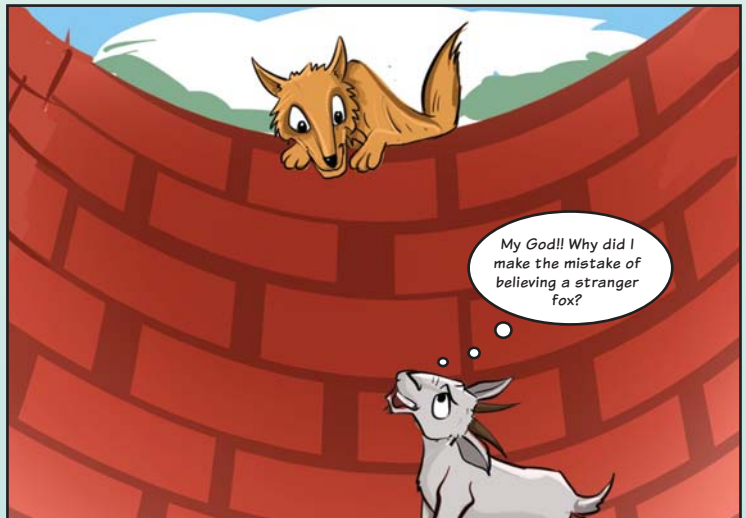

At that moment, a goat came there for water and was looking inside the well. Immediately, the cunning fox thought if it could bring the goat inside, it will be able to get out of the well.

The foolish goat believed the fox's words and jumped inside the well readily.

As soon as the goat came into the well, the clever fox stood over the goat to jump its way out of the well.
